"It is because I am so weak, so sure to make mistakes, to lose my temper and say disagreeable things that I dread going home." Molly Sutton sat in her chair by the window looking over the wide landscape that seemed somehow to have given her a broader view of life.

Perhaps it was because Mrs. Morton sat with her every afternoon after the work was done. She had grown to look forward to these quiet talks that gave her something to think about all the other hours of the day. "Not to understand the truth is to be in danger."

You realize your weakness and knowing it you can provide against it," replied the old lady, laying down her sewing to look at her guest.

"How can I provide against it?" I do not understand," Molly leaned her head wearily against the cushion.

"By building around your weakness just as strong defenses as possible. All real battles are fought in the mind. You must make yourself realize that fear of yourself, fear of failure are thoughts that must be driven out. Fear is a poison of the mind that brings us most of our trouble. Suspicion is a fear that our friends and acquaintances will not be true to themselves. Temper is a kind of panic of the soul that sweeps out all self-control." The old lady paused and absently gazed out of the window.

"I cannot imagine your being afraid of anything, dear Mrs. Morton," said Molly, reaching out and timidly touching her hand.

"Anybody can banish fear who really finds and realizes his best self." Molly listened eagerly, for she did not understand what the old lady meant and she was sure it was something she needed to know.

"I am a deeply religious woman," she began in a sort of embarrassment. "I do not say much about it. People don't about things that they feel very much. I must try and tell you a little about it for you need help."

"Please go on," said Molly in a low tone, for the firm old voice had stopped.

"When our souls are anchored, we can stand up and face the future, sure that we shall be equal to anything that it can bring to us." Her voice died away and silence fell between them as the early twilight crept into the room.

"How can I discover this anchorage?" said Molly in a low voice.

"The joys and sorrows that come to us must be our teachers. A sorrow your soul has accepted, has lived with as a household companion, is a little teacher. I know, for I lost a little girl twenty-five years ago. When you learn to live with your soul, a fault you have looked in the face cannot harm you any more, for you will rise above it. You will have to keep friends with yourself, not lose your self-respect. Then, to you cannot disappoint your friends, those who believe in you and expect great things of you."

"The voice died away and a dull red light that streaked the west was reflected into the room. Molly was looking far off over the tree tops into the red sky. A look of resolve, of strength had come into her face that had shown only troubled longing before. Mrs. Morton saw it and stole away to the kitchen. Mr. Morton was coming from the barn with two pails of foaming milk, a plump cat trotting at his heels. The clatter of utensils and the odor of cooking floated in at the open door. All this was indistinct and far away to the little woman gazing so intently across the fields.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Dec. 5.—Pastor
Russell delivered a masterly address today, from the text, "What hath God wrought?" (Numbers 23:23.) He declared that we are living in the most wonderful period of human history. On every side are contrivances for man's benefit. Evidently the time is near when all the world may enjoy release from excessive toil and hardship. So gradually have these blessings come that we scarcely realize what progress has been made.

Twenty-five hundred years ago, the Pastor explained, the Bible foretold these blessings as characteristic of "The Time of the End." (Daniel 12:4.) Bible students find that this period began with 1799 A. D. For more than a century we have been living in "The Time of the End." This phrase means, not the end of the world, but of the reign of Sin and Death. We are entering a New Era, in which all the evil conditions of the past six thousand years will terminate. Soon earth's great Sabbath, the Golden Age of prophecy and hope, will be ushered in.

While these blessings are designed for all, yet because of man's ingrained selfishness they have gravitated into the hands of a few. This has caused pride on one side and jealousy on the other. As a result, an irrepressible conflict is about to be precipitated. Already we see a great war of nations, each endeavoring to get the lion's share of the blessings which God has provided in these latter days. The nations have become jealous and envious of one another as they see opportunities of wealth and power opening up; and this gruesome conflict has resulted.

Present Blessings From God.

The speaker urged his audience not to lose sight of the fact that our wonderful blessings did not come by man's ingenuity, that just as brilliant men have lived in the past, but that God is letting in the light of the dawning New Dispensation. Behind this is another thought. If in their imperfect condition mankind can accomplish so much, what will they do when made perfect, under Messiah's Kingdom? Then again, if God's feeble creatures can accomplish so much, much, who can measure the power of the Almighty—perfect in Wisdom, Justice, Power and Love?

When we consider what God hath wrought in connection with humanity we are still more astonished. The human body can oil, feed and manipulate itself, can think for itself, can direct its own course. If mankind could make such a machine, they would have something of which to be proud. When we realize that all our wonderful inventions are but imperfect copies of our Creator's works, that man merely uses principles which God has employed in the past, we see clearly that man was made an earthly image of his Heavenly Creator.

Light Breaking Through Darkness.

The Pastor showed that while we have realized God's Wisdom and Power as manifested in nature, we have been seriously handicapped by false doctrines grossly misrepresenting our Creator as devoid of Justice and Love.
These misconceptions came down from the Dark Ages. But the Incoming Age is scattering the ignorance and superstition of the past, and is bringing in the light of the knowledge of God's glory.—Habakkuk 2:14.

To see this clearly we must look in the right direction. There are people today who are looking toward the west for the sunrise. We see learned men who have knowledge on many subjects making the mistake of thinking that Evolution is our God, and not seeing an Intelligent God, holding that Evolution is man's only hope—that ultimately there will be "the survival of the fittest." Think of present conditions in Europe! The fittest are failing in battle. The unfit are left at home to propagate the families of the future. Evolutionists do not stop to think that at the present rate of increase the world would one day be vastly overcrowded, that coal and oil fields would be exhausted, and that a limit would be reached in other directions—that things cannot continue at the present rate for any length of time.

But the Bible points out that man's extremity will be God's opportunity.
After permitting mankind to have all these blessings of our day, He will allow them to dash themselves to pieces in a great cataclysm of trouble; to make shipwreck of all their boasted twentieth century civilization. But before mankind's complete destruction, Messiah's Kingdom will intervene and speak peace to the nations. After the storm there will be a great calm.
Christ and His glorified Church will be God's Channel for the restoration of whosoever will of all mankind.

CATHOLICS HAVE BEEN MISTREATED

Chicago, Dec. 5.—Statements in reply to the recent letter in which Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, explained from an administration viewpoint the situation in Mexico, as regards the Roman Catholic church, are made public here.
One is by Manager Francis C. Kelley, president of the Catholic Church Extension society and the other by the Rev. R. H. Tierney, editor of the Catholic weekly, America, and both renew criticism of President Wilson in recognizing the Carranza government, under which, says Manager Kelley, religious liberty is being denied to the people of Mexico.

The statement by Manager Kelley follows:
"If the files of the department of state are without official records to prove the 'dastardly crime' of outrages committed upon nuns by Mexican revolutionists, there are official records in other places, copies of which have been offered to the department of state. I happen to have some of them myself, given under oath. I have one in particular that has never seen the light of day.
But is Mr. Tumulty perfectly safe in trying to disprove all the outrages against religion through denying one?"

Even if we grant all his contentions, there still remains a great burden of crime absolutely unexplained. One thing, however, he may be certain of, the worst of the affidavits will never be given out, for it stands to reason that no names are going to be mentioned, not for the revolutionists' sake, or for Mr. Tumulty's sake, but for the sake of the poor victims.

Crimes Admitted.
"The murders, the looting, the stealing, the closing of the churches, etc., have been admitted over and over again by the revolutionists themselves. It is most extraordinary that Mr. Tumulty could make the statement seriously that the officers of the American army 'never heard a single report of outrage having been committed.' The fact of the matter is that the story first came to my knowledge through one who received it from officers of both the army and navy. I afterward conversed with one of these officers, and he not only corroborated what I had heard, but gave me additional facts. However, his case is about the same as that of the nuns. While I have his name and his signature, I do not propose to have him dismissed from the army, or have his life a burden by revealing it. Mr. Tumulty may not perhaps have heard that nuns were forcibly taken from trains and sent into the revolu-tionist army. The number of nuns who reached Cuba or the United States safely is negligible. How many of them will never be heard from?"

Thinks It Strange.
"A rather strange thing it is that Mr. Tumulty should use as an authority 'The Very Rev. Antonio J.
Paredes, Roman Catholic vicar general, the archbishop of Mexico City.' When Mr. Bryan was secretary of state he communicated to me a copy of the statement of Canon Paredes and informed me that he was going to give it to the press. Through Dudley Field Malone of New York I gave Mr. Bryan information as to who this Antonio J. Paredes was. I told him that he was vicar general of Mexico City only because he had been appointed by Carranza to that office, despite the fact that the constitution of Mexico proclaims that there is no union in that country between church and state. The venerable archbishop of Mexico City, however, as Father Tierney says, in order to avoid further scandal, allowed Paredes to act, but as a matter of fact very few of the clergy of Mexico pay any attention to him, but recognize the authority of another vicar general, whose appointment was not made by General Carranza. Antonio J. Paredes is today knocking around Mexico City with a revolutionary uniform on. It was he who, taken as a nominal prisoner to Vera Cruz with a number of other priests from Mexico City, worked on the poor prisoners to have them sign a document favorable to Carranza. This is the sort of an 'authority' Antonio J. Paredes is.

It is a matter of interest in this connection to know that Mr. Bryan, when he learned about Canon Paredes, did not give his statement to the public press as he had intended. This fact, of course, must have been known to Mr. Tumulty."

LEMMIE DEPARTS IN GREAT HURRY

J. R. Lemme, a colored tailor, widely known in Ogden, through connections with local tailoring shops and recently associated in the management of a shop on Hudson avenue, has left the city, it is said, with a trail of debts behind him.

His latest victim, it is alleged, was Local Manager Bennett of the Dundee Tailoring company. In speaking of the case Saturday night, Manager Bennett said:

"The fact of the matter was that Lemme passed a check that had proved worthless and was given a few hours to make good. He did not have the money, and didn't know which way to turn. He finally came in my door and asked for the money.
I told him I was not a money lender, not being in the business, but he put up such a pitiful plea that I thought I would take a long chance. Lemme gave me a check as security and the check was no good."

"From all I can learn, Lemme left Ogden and boarded an eastbound Union Pacific train outside the city with the idea of going to Kansas City.
As soon as he reached Evanston he wired back to the officials at the Union depot to forward his baggage which he had stored there. He has other goods stored in Ogden, but they have been attached through the sheriff's office. As he is charged only with a misdemeanor I doubt very much if he can be extradited. Of course his extradition depends upon other developments which may follow."

CALAIS MEETING IS IMPORTANT

Paris, Dec. 5, noon.—Official announcement was made here today of the meeting at Calais yesterday of representatives of France and Great Britain. The statement issued by the foreign office follows: An important Franco-British conference was held yesterday at Calais.
It was attended by the British prime minister, Mr. Asquith; the first lord of the admiralty, Mr. Balfour; the war secretary, Earl Kitchener; the chief of the imperial staff at army headquarters in London; Lieutenant General Sir Archibald Murray; the French premier, M. Briand; the director of political affairs of the French foreign office, M. Marguerite; the French war minister, General Gallieni, with General Graziani, chief of staff; the French minister of marine, Admiral Lacaze, with Admiral De Jon-quieres, chief of the naval staff, and General Joffre, with General Pella.

After luncheon together, the conference began at 2:30 o'clock and lasted until 6, during which time the principal questions uppermost at present were discussed.

The English delegates returned to London during the night. The French representatives returned to Paris.
